Alabama to give encore performance

By JAMIE MORTON

Alabama, a contemporary country-rock band that played to a near sellout audience in Diddle Arena last year, will give an encore performance Oct. 16.

Lee Greenwood, a contemporary country and light jazz performer, will open the show.

Tickets should go on sale Tuesday, said Ron Beck, University Center Board adviser.

Beck said the tickets were shipped yesterday and should be in this week; if they arrive late, the date for sales will be postponed, he said.

Students who buy tickets at the university ticket office will receive a $1 discount. There is a two ticket limit on the discounted tickets.

Tickets will also be on sale at Headquarters, Musicland and Duncan Drugs.

All seats for the 7:30 p.m. concert will be reserved, and prices will be $12.50 and $10.50.

Beck said Alabama's promoters, Keith Fowler Productions, approached him about returning to Bowling Green after the group played to more than 10,000 people last October.

"They were pleased with the treatment they received here last year," said Tom Allen, University Center Board chairman.

The group is returning to Western because "they are one of the biggest names in music," Beck said. "They're doing as much business as anyone."

Beck said bringing the group back and having another successful concert would make other promoters want to bring their groups here. "They need to see us doing business," he said.

"We got the Oak Ridge Boys here last year as a direct result of the Alabama concert," Beck said.

Allen said bringing Alabama back will help rebuild Western's reputation as a marketplace for concerts. "We've had a hard time in the past," he said.

Beck said he believes students will return to see the group because "the ones that bought them (tickets) will remember the quality."

Beck said he hopes that good reviews of last year's concert will draw those students who didn't attend last year.

Alabama has become one of the most successful groups in the country since the release of its first album, "My Home's in Alabama" in 1980.

Since then the group has released three albums, "Feels So Right," "Mountain Music" and "The Closer You Get"; all have gone platinum.

The four-man group was named the 1982 Country Music Association's Entertainer of the Year, Vocal Group of the Year and Instrumental Group of the Year.

The "Feels So Right" album was named LP of the Year by the Academy of Country Music. The academy also named the group Entertainer of the Year and Vocal Group of the Year.

The University Center Board will receive $6,000 and expenses from Keith Fowler Productions for the use of the auditorium and security. Last year the board received $5,000 and expenses.

Heat wave has teams gasping

By CRAIG DEZERN

The long period of hot weather has been more than a sweaty inconvenience; it has created problems for many sections of the university.

"Those readings tell us what we need to do activity-wise," said Bill Edwards, head athletic trainer.

The football training staff is keeping a close watch on temperature and humidity and altering the practice schedule when needed.

Each football player's weight is checked at every practice. "That enables us to know if they're replacing their fluids between practices," Edwards said.

"We're not really doing anything we don't do every August," he said. "We have had to alter practice a little bit more than usual."

Stand by Herald experiences computer problems

Computer problems have limited the news in today's edition of the College Heights Herald to only three pages. Editor Tommy Newton said after a meeting last night of editors, reporters and advisers.

This is the first edition faced with such a problem, said Bob Adams, Herald adviser. The Herald, recognized as one of the best student newspapers in the country, was founded in 1925.

The remainder of the 28-page paper will consist of advertising, and Joann Thompson, advertising manager, said she will talk with advertisers to explain the problems.

The newspaper is under contract to publish many of the ads, Mrs. Thompson said.

The Herald's typesetting machine and computer equipment has worked only sporadically for the past year, Newton said, but the Herald had a backup manual typesetter until last spring. After that time, the Herald was produced at The Franklin Favorite offices in Franklin.

The manual typesetter has been sent to a company in Indiana for repairs and hasn't been returned.

Yesterday, the Herald's entire computer system was unexpectedly shut down for repairs, preventing staff members from writing or editing news. In addition, stories already stored in the computer system could not be called up for editing.

This paper is being produced from original copies of stories, edited on paper and typeset in the Franklin Favorite office. The past two editions of the Herald were typeset at The Grayson County News-Gazette in Leitchfield.

Advisory committee reviews Zacharias' proposed strategy

By MICHAEL COLLINS

President Donald Zacharias' proposed strategy to improve the university is still in the drafting stages, and the document is now being molded into a form acceptable to all sections of the university.

The president's advisory committee, composed of faculty, staff and two student representatives, has been reviewing the proposal and will offer its views on the best way to implement the plan. The committee is expected to report to the president today.

"We're going to ease into it," Zacharias said last week.

In February, Zacharias said he hoped to implement the plan by April, but now he said he wants to wait until more results are available from a self-study and analysis program that the university began last year.

"We would have confused the situation by implementing the plan (then)," he said. "I didn't want to create confusion by having a second process layered on them that might ask several questions that might be answered in the self-study."

The plan, however, will be implemented this semester and should take about nine months, he said.

"We want to phase it out so we get the maximum amount of help in what comes out of the self-study," he said.

The self-study and analysis program, which is required every 10 years for re-accreditation by the Southern Association of Schools and Colleges, should be completed by December.

Specific areas within the university that need improving will be pinpointed in the self-study, he said.

Details of the president's strategy are sketchy, but they reportedly call for a re-evaluation of the university's basic mission and an examination of the goals, academic and administrative activities carried out to meet these objectives.

Members of the president's 12-member advisory committee contacted yesterday declined to discuss the proposal until they have met with Zacharias.

"I'm not sure whether it's ready for release," said Dr. Sam McFarland, professor of psychology.

Dr. Martha Watson, a professor of mathematics and computer science who is also a committee member, said she has some questions about the plan, but she declined to elaborate.

"It isn't clear enough to me on what is meant by some specifics on it," she said. "It may be clear to

Heat forces teams to shorten practice

If the temperature is more than 90 degrees and the humidity is more than 70 percent, the team has only a limited workout in shorts and T-shirts.

He said his staff makes sure the players get all the water they want — and more. "Sometimes we have to force it on them," he said.

And instead of a full-player workout, Edwards said the team practices in sections, giving more time off.

The practice schedule has also been changed several times. Instead of afternoon practices, the team has started working out at 7:30 p.m., Edwards said. And the heaviest training is done at the morning practice.

The soccer program has also been affected by the weather, said coach Neophytos Papaioannou, and it may hurt the team.

"If it keeps going like this for much longer it will," he said, "because some people need to workout hard. It has slowed down practices tremendously."

He said he has kept a close watch on the players, giving them frequent water breaks and working slowly, and has had no heat-related health problems yet.

Band practice starts late enough to beat the heat, said Dr. Kent Campbell, band director. "The type of work we're doing now is not as physically demanding as it will be in the next few days," he said. "Our biggest problem right now is the dust."

The practice field is so dry, he said, that the band stirs up dust every time it marches.

The weather will also cost Western extra money, said Owen Lawson, physical plant director. Air conditioners are running full-time, and the campus grounds require extra watering. Lawson said he won't know how much the added expense will be until he receives the bills in a couple of days.

All air conditioners are working, he said. "At 90 degrees constant, they're doing all they can," he said.

Outdoor recreation classes are also being rescheduled, according to Dr. Burch Oglesby, head of the recreation department. "I'm sure some of the instructors will move inside," he said. "Cross country and jogging are going to go on; they'll just cut down on what they're doing."

Clinical administrator Lucy Ritter said only one person had been brought in to Health Services for heat-related problems — and that wasn't serious.

She recommended that students avoid heavy exercise during hot weather, especially during the middle of the day. Keeping fluids up and eating a little extra salt when perspiring heavily were also recommended.

Most importantly, she said, "if your body is reacting unfavorably if you're in an exercise program or even if you're walking up the hill, you should take it a little easier."

Today's temperature is expected to reach a high of 100 degrees, while a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms has been predicted.

The heat is expected to continue throughout the weekend, with a chance of widely-scattered thunderstorms.

Military science head named

Lt. Col. John M. Weaver, an Owensboro native and 1956 graduate of Owensboro Catholic High School, has replaced Lt. Col. Fred La Roque as head of the Military Science Department.

Weaver comes to Western from Fort Knox, where he served as Chief of Training Devices at the Armor Center. His daughter, Cynthia, is entering Western as a freshman this semester.

Weaver is a 1975 graduate of the Army Command and General Staff College and has a master's degree in history from the University of Missouri.

There are 400 cadets in the department.

some other people, but it's not clear to me."

Zacharias said he wants to look at the findings of the self-study, "then build from that a strategic plan for the growth of the university."

In addition to his advisory committee, Zacharias has discussed the plan with the administrative council, composed of vice presidents, deans and associate deans.

Although the president's plan would result in a document detailing specific plans for each unit within the university, officials from many units are drawing individual plans for their sections, he said.

Officials have discussed selecting three or four faculty members with "interests about trends in broad areas" to prepare a document or conduct a symposium on challenges in higher education, Zacharias said.

Bill Schwing, an Owensboro junior, talks with radio station KQ 101 disc jockey Scooter Davis. Schwing had just learned that he had won a semester's tuition free from the station.

On the money

Student races to win semester's tuition

Bill Schwing, an Owensboro junior and a Kappa Sigma fraternity pledge, was resting at the fraternity house when other members rushed him into a waiting car bound for the university center.

He had registered for a $408 "free tuition" giveaway sponsored by WAKQ-FM, a Russellville radio station, earlier Tuesday, and then went home to await what he thought was to be the 3:30 p.m. drawing.

But the drawing was at about 2:30 p.m., and Schwing, who wasn't feeling well, didn't have his radio on.

He had won but didn't know it. After the drawing, he had only 15 minutes to get to the university center.

Members of Kappa Sigma fraternity heard the drawing, and rushed back to the house to get Schwing.

He said he put on a shirt — but forgot to put on his shoes — and jumped into the car. "There were only 'about eight minutes left," he said.

Schwing thought it was a joke, but realized it was "for real" when the driver of the car was "rippin' down the street."

Bill McGinnis, sales manager of the radio station, said the car hadn't quite stopped when Schwing jumped from it and claimed the money.

Schwing said he had joked with fraternity members before about winning the prize, and adding another keg of beer to a rush party.

Schwing said the money would probably be used to buy a meal ticket and books for the semester. "I just couldn't believe it."

Computer science begins first year

Western moved further into the technological age yesterday with the first classes in its new computer science department.

The department, which will contain about 600 computer science majors, was separated from the math department over the summer.

Planning for the split began a year ago, when the Board of Regents voted to follow a president's recommendation for separation.

The department will be headed by Dr. Donald Henderson, who moved to Bowling Green with his wife only three weeks ago. He comes from Mankato State University in Mankato, Minn., where he chaired a comparable department.

Henderson said the creation of the new department is definitely a step in the right direction for the university, since it's the norm for most colleges that offer computer training.

Computer majors aren't likely to notice many changes at first. "The equipment is mostly the same, but in time, we hope to update by ordering newer machines,"

Henderson said.

The faculty will be Henderson and 10 full-time instructors, with five or six part-timers, he said. Two more part-time positions are expected to be added soon.

Henderson also said that the move cost the university nothing more than his $55,000 salary as an added faculty member and the salaries of the two new part-timers when they are hired.

The department, which offers instruction on computer systems that can cost as little as $37.50 or more than $1 million, will be located in Thompson Complex, Central Wing.

Henderson, who feels some challenge in starting a new department, said his field is probably the fastest-growing in academia. "If you like a change, this is the area to be in."

Keeping up with that much change keeps him "constantly reading," and he said that if an instructor in computer science falls behind just a little, his knowledge of the field can be outdated and useless in six months' time.

Corrections

Several errors were reported in Tuesday's edition of the Herald.

Bob Shults' name was misspelled in a story about a shortage of fans in Bowling Green.

The public safety phone number — 745-2549 — was incorrectly listed in the freshman orientation section.

Temporary parking stickers cost $1 per week with a four-week limit — not $1 for four weeks.

A story about the escort service incorrectly said that public safety once provided 500 escorts during one day. That figure is for the entire semester.

WAKQ-FM in Russellville was inadvertently omitted from a list of radio stations serving Bowling Green.

Bill McGinnis, sales manager at KQ 101, said the station plays contemporary hit music and sees Western as its "core audience."

Newman Center, the Catholic student center at 1403 College St., was also inadvertently omitted from a list of campus religious organizations.

Rev. Bill Allard, chaplain, said the center observes Mass at 7 a.m. each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. Mass is also scheduled at 4 p.m. Wednesday.

The center celebrates Sunday Mass at 5 p.m. each Saturday and at 10:30 a.m. Sunday.

Official predicts enrollment decline

By TED TOWNSLEY

Enrollment at Western is expected to decline this fall.

"The decline will continue until the fall in 1985," said Ronnie Sutton, dean of scholastic development.

He said he expects about 300 fewer students than last spring's enrollment of 12,800.

"National projections state that the decline will be felt by almost every institution of higher education throughout the country," Sutton said. "Western's enrollment will decline because there are a fewer number of high school graduates within the state."

Many believe the decrease will come because the university adopted stricter admissions standards, Sutton said. "This is not true," he said. "This fall the admissions policy has denied only a mere 40 students admission to the university."

The drop-out rate among freshmen will also contribute to the decrease, he said. "Each year only 60 percent of the freshman class returns to school," Sutton said.

Another reason is Western no longer grants tuition waivers to students from four Indiana and two Tennessee counties, Sutton said. In the past, students from those counties paid in-state tuition — less than half the cost of non-resident tuition.

Western's selective admissions policy may be only a small part of the decrease during the next one or two years, Sutton said. "But in the long run it will benefit the future students by prompting them to better prepare in the basics of college work before entering college," he said.

The new policy automatically denies admission to students with high school grade-point averages below 2.0 and American College Test composite scores less than 10.

A high school student must fail both tests before he is denied admission.

If the student is considered ineligible, several options are available within the policy, Sutton said. "The students may elect to retake the ACT, attempt to enroll in another school (junior college), or attend summer school," he said.

In unique cases, students who are denied admission may be accepted to the university if they had been denied admission for some special reason," he said.

Museum adds items to exhibit

5 donations boost historical collection

By GARY ELMORE

Visitors to the Kentucky Museum will have a chance to view five newly donated items.

The new items, which have been added to the museum's collection within the last six months, are grouped as a "Recent Acquisitions" exhibit, and are on display in a showcase in the museum's front lobby.

The items were donated by people from this area, and will be displayed through January. After that, the objects will be added to other exhibits in the museum.

One donation — which may be one of the oldest on display in the museum — is a brass balance used to weigh currency before standardized money was used in the United States. Made in England and dated 1799, it was owned originally by Richard Munford, founder of Munfordville.

Doug Nesbit, public information officer for the museum, said the balance is accurate and was a common possession of merchants and moneychangers when the coinage of one American colony or territory could be different from that of another.

"Since individual coins of the same denomination sometimes differed in weight, and therefore value, it was important when money changed hands to know its exact weight," he explained.

Munford's brother may have been more likely to have used the scale because he owned a log inn in the early 1800s in what is now Munfordville in Hart County. Trappers, woodsmen or traders would travel to the inn and sell their goods at what was one of the few available merchant locations in the area, Nesbit said.

Arts

Nesbit said most of his information comes from legends and courthouse records in Hart County.

The balance must be held to be used. Its wooden box, notched and weathered, is etched with Munford's name and the date, presumably of purchase. It was donated by Beverly and Winifred Davis, of Louisville and Cave City, respectively.

Also among the artifacts is a silver souvenir spoon, of the type that was a popular collector's item at the turn of the century. Ornate lettering engraved on the handle reads "Kentucky," while in its shiny bowl is the word "Glasgow." Other items in the museum's Victorian exhibit further document the Victorians' fascination with the small commemorative spoons.

This spoon, circa 1890, was donated by Marjorie Claggett of Bowling Green.

Perhaps the most aesthetic among the five new pieces is a collage of stapled paper created and donated by Joe Downing, brother of former university president Dero Downing. Joe Downing is a Paris artist who fashioned the artwork from pieces of beige and tan paper cut into abstract shapes and placed in a plain white frame.

Also in the showcase is a pair of lady's glossy, black leather wedding shoes made in New York around 1889. The shoes, displayed in their original box, are believed to have belonged to Mary Sloss of Auburn, who was married to Hershel McCormack on April 16, 1889, Nesbit said.

The shoes were purchased in Louisville, and a label on the side of the shoebox marks their style as "French Opera." Their size, 3D, perhaps attests to the young age of the bride at the time when marriages of 13- and 14-year-old girls were not uncommon.

The shoes were donated by Mrs. Claude Pottinger, of Auburn.

Two carbon filament lightbulbs, circa 1910 and 1930, complete the display.

They were donated by William Neel Jackson, of Bowling Green. The elongated, dark bulbs with huge filaments are strange in appearance when placed alongside today's bulbs.

Nesbit said the museum thrives on donations, although it has paid for some exhibits. "I don't know why people donate; probably regional pride, and it's a way for people to contribute to the community," he said.

"From what I've read it's been sort of a tradition for people to donate to this museum ever since it was opened in the 1930s.

Soccer players share love for international pastime

By STEVE THOMAS

Baseball is often referred to as the American pastime, but if there is such a thing as the world's pastime, soccer is probably it.

Soccer seems to be the one game that all countries play. The Western team has players from five nations with a common link that they refer to as love for the game.

"I am and always will be a soccer player," Jorge Misticostas said.

The Venezuelan senior came to Western for his education, but when he learned of the new soccer team formed last year, he jumped at the chance to play.

"When I came here I felt bad because I thought my soccer life was going to end," Misticostas said.

His soccer life didn't end, and he has become an important key in the soccer program. However, deciding to play is not an easy choice for Misticostas and some of the other foreign students. He estimates that he has lost at least six hours per semester because he plays soccer. And with ever-increasing tuition for foreign students, that adds up to a lot of money.

Marc Suter, a Nashville junior, shares Misticostas' love for the game.

"I love the sport," Suter said. "It's always been in my blood."

Suter has played soccer since he was seven years old. Suter lived in Zurich, Switzerland, for six years and while there attended a school with students from 40 countries. Suter said soccer was the only game that everyone understood.

"Misticostas will graduate this year from Western but plans to remain active in the game. He said he would like to remain here another year and play soccer, since this is only his sophomore year of eligibility, but can't because he pays his own way."

"After I finish (his education) I don't have any excuse to my parents to want to stay," Misticostas said. "I can't tell them I want to stay just to play soccer." The players aren't the only ones that love the game. The coaches do too.

Suter said he feels that Coach Neophytos Papaioannou has done a good job with the team and the team feels his love for the game is the only thing that has kept him going and has made the program successful.

"With what he's got he's done a good job," Suter said. "He's done a lot for the program."

Misticostas shares Suter's opinion.

"He's one of the best coaches I have ever met," Misticostas said. "He's good friends with the team and whatever you need from him you can find."

Papaioannou feels good about what he has accomplished so far but feels he has a long way to go.

The last day of tryouts was yesterday afternoon and the final cut for the team was announced last night. Papaioannou said the final squad will consist of about 25 or 26 players.

More than 50 people tried out for soccer this fall. Although the number was large, Papaioannou had hoped for more. Only three foreign students were among the new tryouts.

Papaioannou attributes this to tuition increases, a smaller enrollment of foreign students and more Americans coming out of high school with soccer ability.

Papaioannou has had the team running through vigorous practices this fall.

The practice sessions start with about 15 minutes of warmup exercises and the team then usually runs one or two laps. The practice proceeds with drills which Papaioannou adds difficulty to each day. The practices finally end with about 20 minutes of scrimmage games.

The soccer team has had few injuries this fall. Loren Shipley, the team's trainer, said the only major injury occurred to Lexington freshman John Morris.

He twisted his knee and will have to have surgery Friday to repair torn cartilage. He is expected to miss two or three weeks.

Only three teams committed to play in Wendy's Classic

Three of the four teams have been selected for the fourth Wendy's Classic.

Because of difficulties encountered in getting a fourth team, however, the fate of the tournament is still in question, Athletic Director John Oldham said.

"We've called 80 or 90 teams, but we got started late (trying to line up teams for the tournament)," Oldham said.

Middle Tennessee has been signed to play, and a source connected with the tournament, who wished not to be identified, said that Kentucky Wesleyan, a Division II basketball power, has agreed to play.

Wesleyan has not signed a contract because the fourth team has not been selected.

"Wesleyan is waiting in the wings as the fourth team hasn't been selected yet," the source said.

The beginning of the fall semester has been difficult for the College Heights Herald.

With today's issue the staff has produced 68 pages. Neither of the first two issues has been done in the Herald office because of computer and typesetting breakdowns.

Today's Herald was produced with the help of an old friend, the Franklin Favorite.

To Henry Stone and Bob Skipper, in particular, the Herald staff again says THANKS.

Veterans May Qualify!

* CREDIT FOR ROTC BASIC COURSE

Your military experience may serve as total credit for the ROTC Basic Course. That means, if credit is granted, you can skip the freshman and sophomore years of ROTC.

* SCHOLARSHIP

You may be eligible to compete for an ROTC scholarship while you're in college. It pays for tuition, books, fees and other purely academic expenses. This is in addition to the tax-free living allowance provided during the Advance Course. You may also receive VA benefits to which you would normally be entitled.

* AFTER GRADUATION

You'll receive a commission as an Army officer at the same time you are awarded your college degree. You may go on active duty for at least three years, or you may take three to six months active duty for training followed by service in the National Guard or Army Reserve.

CHECK IT OUT! It's a good deal for anybody, but it's an even better deal for veterans. Contact the Army ROTC Team at 745-4293/4 or come by room 118 Diddle Arena.

TRY OUR NEW STUFFED BAKED POTATOES

CHEESEBROCCOLI

We start with a big, scrumptious potato. Bake it up so it's hot and steaming. Split it, then add your choice of four tempting fillings: Cheese, Bacon & Cheese, Chili & Cheese, or Broccoli &

Cheese. That's our delicious new stuffed baked potato. Teamed with a Wendy's Hot 'n Juicy hamburger, chicken sandwich, or all-you-can-eat-salad-bar—it's the perfect meal combination.
